1. No tank training was observed on the training grounds south of Camp Spratzern. The watchtowers were unoccupied. On the slopes to the west of the camp, fifteen enlisted men were operating a range finder or surveyor's measure. The instrument was mounted on a tripod, and the length of the base was approximately thirty centimeters. The surveying was being done in an easterly direction.
2. There appeared to be very little personnel stationed at the camp. Two tanks were parked under tents in the camp area.
3. Enlisted men were observed in the barracks area at St. Poelten, most of them wearing bordeaux-red service colors, but some wearing black-red service colors.
4. The following vehicle [redacted] were noted in St. Poelten:

truck, driver wearing black-red service colors
